

STANDARD PIANOS—

THE KIMBALL IN WASHINGTON!
THE KIMBALL IN WASHINGTON!

The Kimball colors are flying at the masthead in the East. Their Washington warehouse, mention of which has been already made in these columns, will be in the charge of W. B. Price. This branch house is established for the accommodation of the rapidly-growing trade in the States near by, especially in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland. At a concert given recently in Washington by the Georgetown (D. C.) Orchestra, the musical public had an opportunity to hear the fine tonal qualities of the Kimball. The Washington Post refers to the concert and the piano in the following manner:

"John P. Lawrence, with orchestral accompaniment, gave Weber's F minor concerto. He shared largely the honors of the evening. An easy reserve power, a smooth freedom and a delicate phrasing distinguish his playing, and made the rendition of even the most difficult and brilliant passages to appear unaffected and naturally real. He was appreciably assisted by the instrument upon which he played. The hall has lacked a really high-class piano, and the introduction of a beautifully-toned Kimball last evening was appreciated by music lovers. Small Liebling will play in Washington in the Metropolitan Hall, March 19, and in Brooklyn on February 23, using the Kimball grand at both entertainments. The agency for Southern California has always been at

WILD STEERS.

Cow-punchers and the Heraldry of the Plains.

The Ingenuity Expended in Devising, and Also in Appropriating Cattle Brands—Cupid and the Running Brand—An Important Subject.

[From a Special Contributor. Copyright, 1894.]

The King of old who could not sign his name needed a sign; the knight who went, armored and with visor down into battle, a cognizance, that is friend might know, and his foe fear him.

Ciphers, seals, crests, coats-of-arms, held, by practical folk, at this end of the century, mere inoperative trappings, decorative belongings of the gloves of our blood and state. Yet each, in its time of sprouting, struck root in real need. A practical necessity called for them and they were.

This also is true of the heraldry of the plains. And as the necessity which rooked it is first modified, then entirely removed by the multiplication of fences, the curtailing of baronial states and the diminishing of baronial eras, so will it fall into disuse, and a character be changed.

Have you any idea what a cattle brand looks like?

Most people east of the Mississippi know in a general way that there are countless herds of cattle running loose upon the vast Western ranges, whose ownership is indicated only by means of the brands they bear; and a moment's thought will show how extensive and complicated this question of cattle brands would grow to be, were millions of dollars in perishable property and thousands of different—often conflicting—interests involved.

In the beginning, as in the beginning of heraldry, every man chose his brand, with reference only to his own needs and his own fancy. As the number of brands increased, the encountering of similar and even identical devices led to misunderstandings, quarrels, and sometimes to bloody and fatal affrays concerning the ownership of cattle so branded.

As the battle of Barnett was lost to the cause of Lancaster through a similarity of cognizances—Warwick attacking his ally, Oxford, by mistake, taking the Streaming Star of that warrior for the Sun of York—so, on many a less historic field of our Western cattle country has bloody war been waged until the steer finally fallen to the better man rather than the rightful owner, because an open flying A looked all too like a running W.

It was thus that the necessity became evident of an official registry and publication of brands, which should ring them into being before the law, and diminish the danger of duplications—in short a sort of College of Heralds. The business is now entirely systematized; and a man's brand is registered and published, just as a deed is.

METHODS OF BRANDING.

It behooves the cattleman to set this manual upon his ambulatory property as early in his somewhat evasive career, as possible. To this end the early branding begins about the first of May, when the main body of the flock is probably from six to eight weeks old.

The cattle of a district are gathered in round-ups; the cowboys or "riders" on each ranch out to the cows of its brand that have calves with them, and later drive them into a corral or branding-pen, where the calves are branded and ear-marked.

So far as I know there are two ways

of performing the branding operation: first, by roping and tying down—or holding down—the animal, while the cow-puncher applies the hot branding-iron; secondly, by roping and tying down the animal, while the cow-puncher applies the hot branding-iron through the bars of the chute against the side or hip of each animal as it is in turn, presented to him.

This latter method, while it is very quick and easy, compared with the other way, with all the time and maneuver involved in roping, throwing, tying, holding, is only practicable where nothing is to be done but put a single brand on the animal, as in the case of rebranding, road-hauling, or some other special mark, which is added subsequently to the regular brand and ear-mark that a man puts on all his calves.

In order to do this regular branding, ear-marking, etc., the calf must be roped and tied, or held.

The business is now entirely systematized; and a man's brand is registered and published, just as a deed is.

METHODS OF BRANDING.

It behooves the cattleman to set this manual upon his ambulatory property as early in his somewhat evasive career, as possible. To this end the early branding begins about the first of May, when the main body of the flock is probably from six to eight weeks old.

The cattle of a district are gathered in round-ups; the cowboys or "riders" on each ranch out to the cows of its brand that have calves with them, and later drive them into a corral or branding-pen, where the calves are branded and ear-marked.

So far as I know there are two ways

of performing the branding operation: first, by roping and tying down—or holding down—the animal, while the cow-puncher applies the hot branding-iron; secondly, by roping and tying down the animal, while the cow-puncher applies the hot branding-iron through the bars of the chute against the side or hip of each animal as it is in turn, presented to him.

This latter method, while it is very quick and easy, compared with the other way, with all the time and maneuver involved in roping, throwing, tying, holding, is only practicable where nothing is to be done but put a single brand on the animal, as in the case of rebranding, road-hauling, or some other special mark, which is added subsequently to the regular brand and ear-mark that a man puts on all his calves.

In order to do this regular branding, ear-marking, etc., the calf must be roped and tied, or held.

Have you any idea what a cattle brand looks like? Most people east of the Mississippi know in a general way that there are countless herds of cattle running loose upon the vast Western ranges, whose ownership is indicated only by means of the brands they bear; and a moment's thought will show how extensive and complicated this question of cattle brands would grow to be, were millions of dollars in perishable property and thousands of different—often conflicting—interests involved.

In the beginning, as in the beginning of heraldry, every man chose his brand, with reference only to his own needs and his own fancy. As the number of brands increased, the encountering of similar and even identical devices led to misunderstandings, quarrels, and sometimes to bloody and fatal affrays concerning the ownership of cattle so branded.

As the battle of Barnett was lost to the cause of Lancaster through a similarity of cognizances—Warwick attacking his ally, Oxford, by mistake, taking the Streaming Star of that warrior for the Sun of York—so, on many a less historic field of our Western cattle country has bloody war been waged until the steer finally fallen to the better man rather than the rightful owner, because an open flying A looked all too like a running W.

It was thus that the necessity became evident of an official registry and publication of brands, which should ring them into being before the law, and diminish the danger of duplications—in short a sort of College of Heralds. The business is now entirely systematized; and a man's brand is registered and published, just as a deed is.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

They Go to Work Under Protest.

Scenes at the First-street Hill Yesterday Morning.

A Meeting at the Old Courthouse Last Evening.

Threatening Letter Sent to the Councilmen—Records of Some of the Agitations—Progress of the Army Eastward.

Eight o'clock yesterday morning found eighty or more men on First-street hill, they having come there to work in response to the offer proposed by the Relief Committee and in compliance with the decision of the second detachment of the unemployed known as the "home reserve," organized the day before at the San Pedro-street headquarters.

A plow with six horses had been started previously so that a considerable quantity of dirt had been loosened and made ready to be shoveled into wagons and hauled away. The chain gang had not been brought out, so the coast was clear for those who desired to go to work.

Arthur Vinette began a conversation with D. F. Donegan and the men gathered about the two. Vinette called attention to the fact that the men were there to show him they could and would work.

One of the crowd said it is a small price to pay for a day's work to give a man his money and get ready to go to work for his wages.

There were many cries of "no." Mr. Donegan continued the conversation with the men, and the latter intimated that the question will be agitated till a satisfactory state of affairs is reached.

The two formations of the chain gang chanced to be present and some of the men said they would not work if those men were to be their bosses. This was explained, however, that they would not be.

By this time a considerable amount of dirt had been plowed up and a wagon had been filled up ready to be loaded. Another wagon filled with picks and shovels stood not far away.

Mr. Donegan called out for all men who had had breakfast to take a shovel and start to filling the wagon. A few men moved, but none actually went to work. Some of them said they wanted to be enrolled first.

Mr. Donegan said to go to work and the enrolling would be attended to. This did not suit the crowd and the men began to lose patience and said he would wait but five minutes longer. The given time elapsed and the men did not commence work.

He then told the men to stop plowing, and was about to walk away, when one of the chain-gang foremen called attention to a young man at the plow who had been following that implement all the while the rest of the men had been talking as to whether or not to work.

Mr. Donegan called the young man to him, and asked if he was "broke." He replied he had $1 left, and had his room paid for till Monday. Mr. Donegan told him to come to his place and he would be given a job.

Mr. Donegan started to leave the place, when one of the men whose voice and manner showed him to be considerable of a walking delegate or agitator, demanded that the men had not had their rent.

Mr. Donegan asked if he had not had his breakfast, but the man said he was not looking for work. He was, he said, a taxpayer, and was there to show the men were given the work that had been promised them. The man talked quite threateningly, and Mr. Donegan finally said he would give the other men a chance, and, as they had finished their breakfast, they began to ply the shovels with considerable rapidity.

After the men had got well started at the work, all those who had not had breakfast were asked to make the fact known, and were given a written request to the Associated Charities that breakfast be served to them.

The men worked well till soon after 11 o'clock, when they were given tickets for their dinner.

There were some complaints among them during the morning that the supper furnished them the night before were only 6-cent meals, and were not good. Upon investigation it was found that each applicant for a meal had been given a large plate of good soup, containing a quantity of meat and potatoes, together with four slices of bread.

The meals furnished the men yesterday were, however, different. A Times reporter dined with the men yesterday noon, and found the meal to be a palatable and substantial one.

The dinner was served at the Opera restaurant, on South Main street. The menu started out with soup, and, at the same time, there were lettuce and radishes on the table. This was followed by a choice of some six or eight kinds of meat and fish, together with a generous amount of mashed potatoes and vegetables, and plenty of bread and butter. With these one could have for a beverage tea, coffee, milk or wine.

After the men returned to work in the afternoon a list of the names and addresses of those having families was secured, also the number of members of each family. There were twenty-six names on this list. Provisions were provided for the families by the Associated Charities. There were eighty men working during the day.

Just before quitting time arrived a dispute arose between Mr. Donegan and some of the men, principally Vinette, which resulted in the former saying he would wash his hands of the whole affair, and walking away.

A meeting was held by the men in front of the old Courthouse last evening, and a considerable crowd collected around the building.

"Capt." Gregory of one of the lately-formed companies spoke. He said it had been reported that a job was offered him at Rivera. He wished to say the man who offered him the job sent him a postcard telling him to come. He went to Rivera, in response to the call, and found another man had been given the job promised him.

Mrs. Alex, being called upon, made some rather extended remarks about the importance of woman's rights. This did not appear to be especially interesting to the crowd, and she came back to the subject in hand. She said it may be the best thing to do, but she did not believe she would go on First-street hill and work for "old" Donegan.

A set of resolutions was adopted, censuring the City Council and Board of Supervisors, but not censuring Mayor Rowan, for refusing to furnish four or five days' rations to the first detachment of the "industrial army," leaving this city for Washington.

It was remarked by some of the speakers that the celebration proposed to be held soon by the merchants of the city ought to be given up, and the money intended to be used for it given to provide work for the starving men of the city. It was also stated that there may be a beautiful parade in that celebration, but there will be one part of that parade which will not be so beautiful. That part of the parade will show the people what is the condition of the starving men of the city.

Arthur Vinette took the place occupied by the speaker, and after talking at some length on the condition of things, said the City Council, instead of giving the relief needed, had turned the matter over to the Associated Charities. That organization had used the men well and there was no complaint to make against it. The men, however, do not want charity, but justice.

He announced that ex-Mayor Hazard had informed him the men can go to work Monday and for one day's work get two days' meal tickets. He put the question as to whether the men should accept the offer and go to work again Monday and the same was adopted by a large majority.

It was urged by two or three of the speakers that the City Council does not understand the situation, but that it is best to be law-abiding and wait and see what can be done. It was also said the fault is with the Council and Supervisors and the men will not be responsible for what may occur if something is not done to relieve their condition.

The meeting dispersed with the understanding the men will meet at the same place this morning, where they will form and march to and attend the services at the Church of the New Era in Illinois Hall.

THE "HEADQUARTERS" BROKEN UP.

The building on San Pedro street, which, for a number of days was the home of the "army," was practically deserted yesterday, but there was an unsavory order from the holes in the floor where had been thrown orange peel, decayed fruit, tin cans and other refuse. The owner of the building informed the Chief of Police yesterday that he had ceased the tenancy as far as the "army" is concerned.

A THREATENING LETTER.

President Teed of the City Council received a letter yesterday signed "Labor" and saying: "You and your fool counsel will be blown to hell."

THE MAN O'BRIEN.

In striking contrast with the condition of the hungry men lying on the uninviting floor, and many of them uncovered by blankets, in the San Pedro-street barracks, some four or five nights ago, were the condition and actions of "Quartermaster Gen." O'Brien, who has the mullah audacity and the brazen effrontery to act as one of their leaders.

O'Brien, with an assurance which in view of the facts seems incomprehensible, appeared last Monday before the City Council and afterward before the Supervisors and appealed for aid in getting the men out of town. At the same time he was collecting money from those who by his lubricated tongue he induced to give their cash toward the scheme.

At a late hour of the night he entered a well-known drinking place and began to carry things with a high hand. He treated "the boys" and drank himself till he became tipsy. Money flowed freely and that out of his pocket. He said it was no trouble for him to get all the money he wanted, and kept on "blowing in" the cash. It is said the amount of money he parted with in a couple of hours or so was fully $25.

O'Brien was reported to be drunk yesterday afternoon, but as the police did not chance to run across him he was not arrested. His action in remaining in town seems very strange when it is remembered he declared with much oratory the day before that he presumed to lead them that they would next hear from him at the nation's capital. O'Brien will probably keep very much out of sight for a time, as the police are telling what will become of him should he show himself near any of those whose money he squandered.

THE UNEMPLOYED WITH FAMILIES.

A committee called at the Times office yesterday and requested the publication of the following, at the same time urgently requesting the suppression of all names:

About forty of the unemployed—heads of families and residents of this city—met yesterday and appointed a committee of five to call on the City Council to ascertain if something can not be done to furnish work for all citizens who have families dependent upon them. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

We tender a vote of thanks to the Council for what they have already done to give work to the unemployed, and we earnestly ask them to continue the same."

All unemployed married men were invited to meet at the old Courthouse at 9 a.m., Monday.

NEW ARRIVALS.

The police were kept busy yesterday looking after the hordes of unemployed, who appeared on the streets in larger numbers than for several weeks past. In addition to the foraging parties from so-called "industrial army" which had its headquarters over in the city, there were a number of new arrivals on the afternoon train from the north, genuine "hoboes" who came by "bill of lading" and tumbled off the moment the train entered the yards, scattering at once to different parts of the city.

GREGORY'S BAD RECORD.

Capt. McKee yesterday spent some time investigating the case of the man Gregory, who at a recent meeting of the army's uptown, stated that he and his family had subsisted for several weeks upon a few beans. The officer learned that the family had received no less than $10.00, or groceries from charitable sources within the past two weeks, but whether any other assistance has been given them could not be ascertained. It was learned, however, that Gregory had been tendered a job at Rivera, where he was promised a month's work budding fruit trees. Money was advanced him for car fare, but he evidently preferred to remain as captain of a company of his fellow-sufferers, rather than get out and earn bread for his family.

THE MOB.

The March to Pomona from Monrovia—An Orange Grove Raided.

The so-called "army" started out from Monrovia yesterday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock, the objective point being Pomona, where they expected to camp for the night. Before leaving Monrovia, the mob raided an orange grove belonging to the Bradbury estate and loaded themselves up with fruit. The people of Monrovia treated the vagabonds very kindly, giving them all they could eat both Friday evening and yesterday morning, and so far as known no other depredations were committed. The people of Pomona having, of course, been warned of their approach, sent out a delegation to meet the crowd and furnish them with provisions in the hope that they would not be annoyed by them.

No complaints were made to Sheriff Cline yesterday, from which it is inferred that if any depredations were committed they were not serious enough in the eyes of the sufferers to invoke the aid of the law. The gang will pass out of the confines of Los Angeles county, in all probability, today. As they presented the more sparsely settled sections some uneasiness is felt that they may become bolder and take advantage of isolated communities, but the authorities all along the line have been warned, and they will

IN HOLIDAY

ATTIRE!

Our big, bright and elegant salesroom was in holiday attire yesterday—our opening day. It was a day of pleasure for us; we received many of our old friends, and think we made many new ones. Our souvenirs were appreciated, and so was the music. The Southern California Music Co. was kind enough to lend us one of their elegant SHAW PIANOS, which added materially to our orchestra. Nothing like having pleasant and obliging neighbors. Have you noticed our handsome window display? Yesterday an Eastern visitor remarked that he had dressed windows for twenty years, but said our exhibit was the handsomest he had ever seen as a clothing window. The artistic effect is due to the talent of Mr. M. A. Paley, a young gentleman in our employ whose services we appreciate. Our window-dresser would find it a very difficult task to dress a nice window without nice goods.

That is Where We Come in

For a little praise; we handle fine, tasty, well-made goods, and we hustle for trade by giving good values, and employ only the most obliging and courteous salesmen. We are not like the man who took his pail and set down in the middle of a field on a rock and waited for a cow to back up and be milked. That man was first cousin to the man who sat down and waited for business to wake up. BUSINESS is IMPROVING WITH US EVERY DAY simply because we do business on correct principles, and have what people want in nice, stylish clothing for men and boys, and sell at popular prices. Just received two more lots of those Boys' Combination Suits, consisting of a suit, extra pants and cap to match, the whole outfit for $4; also two styles of better goods in "combinations" for $6. Our Furnishing Goods and Hat Departments are now up to anything in town for fine, as well popular-priced goods.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE

A Very Dull Day at the City Hall.

Sensational Suit Filed by Mrs. Ellen Cusick.

She Wants Her Husband to Pay Her Alimony.

The Order Probably Granted Under a Misapprehension of the Facts—General Court Notes—New Suits.

At the City Hall yesterday business was practically suspended, the "funny" problem for the time being monopolizing the attention of the Councilmen and other officials.

About the Courthouse yesterday there was unusual quiet, the business transacted being in the line of necessary routine work only. Department One, the criminal court, was closed from morning until night, owing to a dearth of cases to try; the grand jury held no session, and the Board of Supervisors went out into the country to inspect roads, leaving the various other county officials to attend to such important matters as were brought to their attention.

THE COURTHOUSE.

THE COURTS.

Mrs. Cusick Will Sue Her ex-Husband for Alimony—New Suits.

On the minute-book of the Board of Supervisors late Friday evening an order was entered, directing the County Clerk to file papers in a suit for alimony, entitled Ellen Cusick vs. James C. Cusick, the reason assigned being that the plaintiff was destitute and unable to pay for the filing of the papers. From all that can be learned, this Mrs. Cusick is the same woman who was committed to the insane asylum by Judge Shaw about a year ago, but who was since discharged as cured. Mrs. Cusick is the former wife of City Plumbing Inspector Cusick. She came to this city early in last year from the North, and proceeded to make life miserable for her ex-husband and other public officials about the City Hall. She claimed that Cusick had deserted her and that she had never been divorced from him. Her loud manner and peculiar conduct soon brought her into the Police Court, and afterward she was taken before a lunacy commission and examined as to her sanity, with the result as stated. At the time of this examination Mr. Cusick testified that he had secured a divorce from the woman five years before. She had behaved in so singular a manner that he was convinced that she was not in possession of her right senses. A commitment was, accordingly, ordered.

After remaining in the asylum for a few months, Mrs. Cusick was released, and she came directly back to this city. For a time she appeared well, but soon her old hallucination came over her, and she began to torment Cusick and his family. In February of this year she was once more brought into court and re-examined. The court did not then believe that she was dangerous or badly deranged, and allowed her to go. Now it seems that she has gained the confidence of some attorney, and induced the latter to make the request indicated by the Board of Supervisors. The members of the latter body evidently were not aware that Cusick had been regularly divorced from wife No. 1 in San Francisco, for it was alleged by the attorney that Cusick had not made any provision for her support at all.

In all probability the action will be dismissed before it reaches trial, or at least as soon as the true facts are learned. Had the Supervisors known of the circumstances surrounding the affair it is not likely that they would have made the singular order referred to.

Court Notes.

Ten days' additional time was ordered granted the plaintiff in the case of Weisendanger vs. Wilson yesterday by Judge Webb, in which a statement on a motion for a new trial might be prepared and served.

The disbarment proceedings which were to have come up in the matter of Koefed vs. Gordon yesterday in Department Two, have been continued to March 26.

Judgment was ordered for plaintiff in the suit of Minkin vs. Cook, et al., yesterday by Judge York. The action was to recover a balance due on the price of an orange crop.

The case of Field vs. Young, and Smith vs. the Kansas Street-Improvement Company, have been continued to March 19 and 21 respectively, by Judge Van Dyke for hearing.

Department One's calendar was clear for the first time in many weeks yesterday, and nearly all of the other departments were free from any suspicion of a rush of business. Judge Clark's time was occupied by a minor case, and Judge McKinley listened to the other installment of evidence in the divorce case of Smith vs. Smith. No session of the grand jury was held, but further instructions are not looked for until Tuesday or Wednesday next.

Clara M. Gordon was granted a decree of divorce from Gordon yesterday in Department Six.

The defendant in the case of the Cucamonga Fruitland Company vs. S. C. Simpson paid into the court yesterday the amount of money due on judgment extended against him, and the clerk of Department Six was ordered to apply the same to the satisfaction of the claim.

Dist. Atty. Dillon filed a new official record yesterday with the names of J. M. Newton and E. Harper attached as sureties, to take the place of Mr. Nelson, who withdrew his name from the document.

New Suits.

Preliminary papers in the following new suits were filed with the County Clerk yesterday:

F. J. Capitan vs. R. T. Chane; suit for $425, alleged to be due for services rendered.

James Molr vs. Alfred Day, Jr., et al.; suit for $3000 on a promissory note.

J. M. Kellerman vs. Robert F. Jones et al.; suit to compel payment on stock.

J. Walte et al. vs. J. A. Drifill; suit for $725, alleged to be due on purchase price of trade.

David A. Cochran vs. Alfred A. Cochran; suit to quiet title.

George D. Patten et al. vs. David J. MacPherson et al.; petition for partition of realty.

Petition of Elizabeth B. Ward to be declared an insolvent debtor, with liabilities of $12,452 and assets of $3500.

SOLOMON AND HIS FAMILY.

A Story of Some Intelligent White Rats and Their Tricks.
(From a Regular Contributor.)

Solomon was a great white rat, who lived in an artist's studio in New York. He received his name because of his wisdom and his solemn face.

His companion was known as Jumper, and never did anything remarkable except jumping. But Solomon was always doing wonderful things.

Solomon's mistress declared that his whiskers were longer, more delicate and whiter than those of any other rat that ever lived, but mistresses are apt to say such things of their favorites. Other people saw nothing wonderful about Solomon, so far as his appearance was concerned.

Solomon was as trustworthy as a dog. He refrained from nibbling the curtains and rich stuffs that were scattered about the studio, and was more particular not to take cheese or rich cake up on the sofa, where he was allowed to play and sleep when his paws were clean. Jumper had to be given away because of his nibbling propensities.

Now, it so happened that a friend of Solomon's mistress had some rats, a father and mother and seven children. One night a stray cat found her way to the cage and ate up the old rats. Perhaps she satisfied her appetite with them, or maybe she thought she would leave the little ones till they were bigger and their bones would be better worth picking. At any rate the seven little things were left orphans.

Their master found them in the morning squealing and trembling and was sorely puzzled what to do with them. The scrub woman suggested that they should be drowned, but the artist suddenly remembered his friend, the pretty black-eyed young lady who owned Solomon, so he appealed to her.

Solomon's mistress agreed to adopt them, and the cage was taken into her rooms.

Solomon stared and then went cautiously up to the newcomers. He soon showed signs of joy at their arrival, and, to the astonishment of those who watched him, thinking that in spite of his former goodness he might be a cannibal at heart and would taken advantage of the occasion, he immediately took the little rats under his protection.

He called them to him and coaxed them to snuggle down by his side, as their mother would have done.

When they were allowed to run about he watched them and taught them where they might go and where they were not to go, running after any wild youngster who strayed behind screens or meddled with what they ought not to touch.

Only one of the seven orphans turned out a genius, but all of them became respectable rats and a great credit to Solomon.

The genius of the family one day came upon a guitar lying on the sofa, and, running up to it made the strings sound. The music pleased him much that after his discovery he frequently went in search of the instrument and scampered back and forth over the strings, to his own great delight, and to the amusement of all who saw him.

"LADY" CIGARETTES.The Attitude of Society Women Toward Them.

An Investigation Among Representative Washington Women—Madame Romero Against Smoking—Ideas of Cabinet Women.

(From a Special Contributor.)

Among the men who have been sent abroad to represent this country as Ministers is one from the far West, whose wife is a confirmed cigarette-smoker.

She took no pains to conceal the fact, and didn't hide herself in the seclusion of her chamber to indulge in her fondness for the weed. It was well understood among the guests who went to the house that after dinner or during the evening she would smoke in the parlor with the gentlemen.

Fortunately the country in which she is now the first American woman, is one where tobacco is not frowned on. Moreover, many a dark-eyed beauty there puffs the fragile paper rolls, or winds them with deft fingers for the convenience of herself and companions.

Probably Mr. Cleveland did not know, and would not care a rap if he did, whether the wives of his appointees smoke or not, but when it gets so that an American womanhood is represented abroad by ladies with a taste for cigarettes, it is natural to inquire what the attitude of leading women toward the habit may be, and how far they have become addicted to smoke themselves.

At present there seems to be a demand for the facts concerning cigarette-smoking by women. A reported smoking-English woman has been widely exploited. The latest English fashionable novel flaunts the woman smoker and the feminine characters smoke on every opportunity, and some that are exceedingly inopportune. It is continually reported that women are adding smoking-sets and cigarette-holders to their stock of bijouterie. The doctors, in friendly moments, when not carrying around surplus stocks of professional etiquette, drop hints of the appalling number of female patients they have who smoke, and the alarming increase in the number.

Really, "Do you smoke, or don't you?" is a question.

Mrs. Romero, wife of the Mexican Minister, said in reply to such an inquiry:

"Smoke? Indeed I don't. I should as soon think of seeing Polly (the pet parrot) smoke. I have never seen ladies smoking in Washington, although I have heard they do sometimes. But I do know a charming woman who gave a large dinner shortly after coming to Washington to live. When the ladies reached the drawing-room after dinner she asked them if they would not have cigarettes. When they all declined she looked surprised and said, 'Oh, you needn't be afraid of me.' The ladies still said 'no,' and then she explained her offer and astonishment with, 'Why, I had heard that all Washington women smoked and I was afraid you might miss something you needed. I laid in a supply and all the outfit.' She never made the offer again. I should never offer cigarettes in my own home, for I don't think it womanly."

"But don't all the ladies smoke in Senator Romero's country?"

"That's quite another thing. But still the last time I was in Mexico I found many ladies of the very best families were giving it up. When I asked why they said it was going out of fashion. Even some of the older ladies, who had been accustomed to smoking all their lives, were trying to follow the new style. I don't believe you will find it very prevalent in Washington, for I can truthfully say that I have never been offered a cigarette in all the time I have lived here."

"Do you approve of smoking?" was asked Mrs. Lamont.

"Indeed I do not," was her emphatic reply. "I never should encourage it by offering any one cigarettes, and I never should use them myself. Of course there are certain cases where physicians order cigarettes for their medical properties, but to smoke ordinary tobacco cigarettes I should not approve."

"Would you ever visit again at a house where the ladies did produce cigarettes?"

"You can't get me to answer that, for it happens that I visit houses where friends to whom I am quite attached do use them. I shouldn't want to say I couldn't go there simply because they happen to have different opinions on that subject. They are very nice and cultured people. I wouldn't want them to find I had criticised them publicly and it would not be good taste for me to do so. When we were in Washington before I saw ladies smoking, but only in rare instances, and then the women had acquired the habit abroad. You know that is where our girls learn to tolerate it. Then there was Mrs. de Struve, wife of the Russian Minister here. She always smoked, no matter where she was, after dinner. Whether in her own house or at other houses she always went back to the dining-room for a cigarette. She said, she was used to it and had to have it."

Everybody who was in the capital at the time Mrs. de Struve reigned refers to her habit, and the tone in which some of them describe the sang froid with which she calmly lit her cigarette in the houses of some very straight-laced people is strongly tinged with admiration for her audacity. After a time Mrs. de Struve ceased to be looked upon with horror, yet she is better remembered today for her cigarettes than for her wit and brilliant bonnets which were really the most fascinating Washington knew at the time.

Everybody laughed when asked if they smoked. Mrs. Olney looked vastly amused at the idea.

"I have heard of ladies who smoked, but you can be assured they wouldn't be apt to get cigarettes in my house. While I don't like the habit for myself, other women may look at it differently, and it is one of my habits not to interfere with other people's opinions. Then there is that old adage about 'Rome and Romans,' and I think some women who smoke abroad have that in mind when they do it."

"I have seen ladies smoking abroad, of course, and after that somehow, perhaps, it doesn't seem quite such an offense. Most of the American women who do use cigarettes, I think, contract the habit abroad, but I'm sure it hasn't made any great progress, no matter what is said, among women in this country."

"Will, do you think it is lady-like?"

"You can be quite sure I shall not smoke myself, and there will be no cigarettes provided for ladies in this house as long as I live here."

Miss Herbert's smile was decidedly retrospective when the subject of cigarettes was broached to her. The smile seemed to be the result of the memory of some scene that rose before her blue eyes, that I couldn't see.

"Indeed, I've never seen it in Washington, but," with a long pause, "I've been where cigarettes were smoked summers."

Miss Herbert wouldn't say where, or what summer, or who, only just that tantalizing smile that meant there was some fun attached to the event.

"Do you think the coming woman will be a creature of cigarettes and smoke?"

"What nonsense! The girls who do smoke now simply do so out of a spirit of fun and bravado. I don't think they really like cigarettes—and then for physical reasons they aren't likely to follow it widely. Then it isn't very womanly, and there is nothing to be gained by it, as in bicycle-riding, for instance. You know girls pick it up sometimes at boarding school. But I think they drop it after they get married."

Mrs. Hoke Smith was sure all womanly women were opposed to their sex taking any active interest in cigarettes. None of her friends, as far as she knew, were given to cigarettes, and she was pretty certain that unless there was a reorganization of women and the social proprieties none of them would contract a fondness for smoking in her house. She didn't think that there was any need for anxiety about American women smoking. She didn't think men liked to see their wives with cigarettes between their lips, or with stained fingers, and she thought this would be sufficient in itself to keep the cigarette peculiarly the adjunct of men. Then, too, if smoking disturbed men's nerves, why it certainly would have a similar effect on women. Of course, some men found it so. When we were in Washington, and possibly now and then a woman might also, but the average woman would find cigarettes at any rate unwholesome. If women had a home and children to take up their time and keep them from ennui she was sure they wouldn't have time to think of cigarette smoking.

Mrs. Smith's ideas are eminently sensible, certainly.

Mrs. Thurber, wife of President Cleveland's private secretary, was the only woman of all to whom the cigarette question was broached who confessed a personal antipathy to tobacco.

"Why, I dislike the odor of tobacco so much that I certainly disapprove of smoking, and especially of cigarette smoking for women. I disapprove of it from every standpoint. It doesn't seem to be womanly. Some women might think it was, however. You can never tell what will not be defended on that ground. I don't think it is attractive in any way whatever. I know women do smoke, for I hear of it frequently. Of course I haven't been in Washington long enough to know whether it is common here or not. I do think it is increasing among women, and I can't help it if our great-grandmothers and the mothers of some estimable men did smoke their pipes—it don't seem to me womanly. Then, too, I should have to oppose it as the mother of children whom I hope will not be smokers; yes, as a mother I should be most strongly opposed to my children seeing women smoke. I wouldn't for the world have my boy see me with a cigarette in my mouth."

At this juncture the boy, who had been sitting quietly at the other side of the room, created a laugh by announcing:

"I did see it."

It was rather amusing, but the young man was as red as a flag in the face, and was evidently determined that if the honor of the Thurber family was in his charge it should be gallantly maintained.

"I don't think it is nice for ladies to smoke, and I don't want my mother to," he stoutly added.

"There, you see," laughed Mrs. Thurber, "how the family feels. But," looking aside at all the boys felt the same way, "I'm sure there wouldn't be many women taking up cigarettes."

"Yet, in spite of all this, it may seem strange, but one of my most intimate friends smokes with her husband, and I can't think she is any the worse off for it. She never smokes when any one is there, but when they are alone after dinner they sit down together, and while he smokes his cigar she has her cigarette. He has fallen into the way of joining him in that way. She's a lovely womanly character, and I esteem her very highly, but it doesn't alter my own feeling against cigarette smoking."

The wife of Congressman Geary, when asked if she didn't seriously object to women who smoked cigarettes, said, in her jolly way:

"Object, and what should I object to it for? Just think of it from an artistic standpoint. Whatever else is said against it, nobody can deny that many women, seen through a dim haze of smoke, look all the better for it. Then," enthusiastically, "just picture a pretty girl, with a prettily curved arm, white wrist, and a well-shaped hand holding a dainty cigarette holder while she puffs rings and little clouds of smoke that soften all the flaws in her beauty, and lend a lace-like charm to all her perfections. Now, what can be more artistic?"

"Oh, that's another thing. Why, looked at as I picture it, the girl who reveals in cigarettes is a positive blessing to a community that suffers from a dearth of beauty."

And that is all she could be persuaded to say.

These opinions on cigarette smoking are from various points of view, but the thing that is really proved is that while these representative women range themselves against a cigarette in the mouth of a woman, they all have friends, presumably their equals, who only believe differently, but put their belief in practice.

Running Across New Words.

The Parliamentary Labor Commission has taken an immense amount of evidence throughout England, and incidentally has learned something like 2000 new words. When a witness used a word unknown to the commission he was asked its meaning and the definition was written down. Thus has come about what is practically a slang dictionary. "Onco men," it is useful to know, are men who work for day wages. A "fogger" is a middleman in the nail and chain trade. A hansom is technically known as a "showful." A cabman who owns the vehicle he drives is a "little mush," while an inexperienced Jehu may be either a "gardener" or a "whacker." The glossary even acquaints Parliament and the world with the fact that "boose" is derived from the Arabic name for beer.

What is Eczema?

It is an agony of agonies.

A torture of tortures.

It is an itching and burning of the skin almost beyond endurance.

It is thousands of pin-headed vesicles filled with an acrid fluid, ever forming, ever bursting, ever flowing upon the raw excoriated skin.

No part of the human skin is exempt.

It tortures, disfigures and humiliates more than all other skin diseases combined.

Tender babies are among its most numerous victims.

They are often born with it.

Sleep and rest are out of the question.

Most remedies and the best physicians generally fail, even to relieve.

If CUTICURA did no more than cure Eczema, it would be entitled to the gratitude of mankind.

It not only cures but

A single application is often sufficient to afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure.

Everybody Knows

The merchants of this city included, that 50 cents will purchase One Dollar's worth of Dry Goods at the

CITY OF PARIS,

203 to 205 North Spring Street. This fact is attested by the continued crowds of eager buyers to be seen daily in the store. A large stock of choice, first-class goods still on hand, but everything in the stock must be sold, as the agent of the building has advertised the store for rent, which indicates beyond question that the goods must be sold and the City of Paris Dry Goods Store closed. Now is your chance—the opportunity of a lifetime—to purchase first-class goods at

50 Cents on the Dollar.

Save your money. Do not make a mistake by paying anybody a profit when you now have a chance to make your purchases here at just one-half of what you are compelled to pay elsewhere for the identical same class of goods. Remember, the City of Paris never did, and does not now, carry any "Auction trash," leavings of other stores, old shelf-worn rubbish, but the goods are first-class, bought in the best markets of the world, and now offered at 50 cents on the Dollar. The goods must be sold now. Don't waste time. Come at once, and for your 50 cents purchase merchandise worth $1.00.

Once Again

Do not pay anybody a profit. When this store is closed will be time enough to pay higher prices, and good living profits, which will surely be the case.

THE MASTER'S WORK

Four Religious Conclaves Coming.

The Assemblies of Presbyterians and Methodists.

Reformed Episcopalians in Counsel Tambien.

The Unitarians Will Deliberate at the Same Time in Harmony With the Others—Important Church Questions On.

NEW YORK, March 12.—(Special Correspondence. Copyright, 1894.) Rarely do matters purely religious assume the interdenominational importance of the present preparations for the coming congresses of the four great denominations: namely, the Presbyterian General Assembly, the general council of the Reformed Episcopal Church, the Methodist General Council and the representative conference of the American Unitarian Association. The members of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene in general conference at Memphis, Tenn., in May, the same month selected by the three other religious bodies above noted. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a name apt to mislead all who are not Methodists, for its work is as important in Methodism as is that of any other assemblage of the denomination. Of course, its representation will be exclusively Southern, such churches as Bishop John C. Keener of New Orleans, Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald of Nashville, Bishop E. R. Hendrix of Kansas City, Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson of Baltimore, Bishop R. K. Hargrove of Nashville and Bishop Duncan of South Carolina, being the ones who will be in authority.

The matters requiring most consideration, in the opinion of the delegates already chosen, will be church extension, mission work in undeveloped fields, and the more liberal endowment of homelands. This is in itself a sufficient indication of how free from internal dissensions the church is, and of the steady progress it has made in its territory. There is a project for effective work in the interest of seamen along the Gulf States, and the condition of the seminaries will be improved. Finally, also, as the resources of the churches have greatly increased during the twelve months last passed, indeed, the Methodist Church, South, is a religious phenomenon in this respect, and that revival all over the country, which some have ascribed to the hard times, has not been without

SKY-SCRAPERS.

Where Emerson Was Appreciated.

Prof. Crabbitt Enlightens Mrs. Symple's Literature Class.

He Feared They Might Find Emerson Somewhat Vague and Abstruse.

An Insidious Scheme—The Class Begins Work—The Professor Reads—His Listeners Were Charmed.

(From a Special Contributor.)

I was living in Oortown when the epidemic known as culture swept through society in its most malignant form, and I distinctly remember that Mrs. Jack Symple was one of the first to go down before it.

Since then I have often thought that if some learned man had had the presence of mind to inoculate the rest of the people in town with some virus from that silly creature's brain the plague might have been averted, but nothing of the sort was done, and, as the craze is "catching" as the measles, it spread through the town with an awful rapidity, and within less than a month there was scarcely a man or woman within the circle of my acquaintance who was not more or less affected by it.

The disease was brought into town by Miss Flossie Spencer, who caught it in Boston at an Ibsen reading, and she had not been home more than a week before my acquaintance with her was made. My acquaintance asked me, in the most careless way imaginable, what I thought of Tolstoy, although they knew perfectly well that I had never thought of him at all. And a few days later every new Oortown resident with attempts on Russian names, and so it was no surprise to me or to any one else when the whole nonsense culminated in a new local and progressive institution called Our Literature Class.

AN INSIDIOUS SCHEME.

It was Mrs. Jack Symple's idea, though her husband did insist upon claiming credit for it, and I am sure that nothing ever attempted in Oortown looked as promising at the start as did Our Literature Class, and I am sure it would have been going to this very day if it had not been—but I will tell the story just as it happened and not begin at the ending of it.

It was, as I said before, Mrs. Jack Symple's idea, that is to say, she heard there was a literature class in successful operation in the distant city of Mapplefield, and then it occurred to her that if there was room for such a thing in that community there was room for one in our own Oortown, and, as she was a very sensible one, she started with an instant's delay to drum up recruits for the Oortown Literature Class.

"Only think how delightful it will be," she exclaimed, gushingly, when she came to beg me to put my name down. "We are all to meet once a week and read out loud, and then once a month we're to have somebody that's real cultivated come and give us a little talk or lecture on what we've been reading, so that it will make it different from the other readings we used to have and ever so much more interesting."

"And what are you going to read?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing but real literature; only Emerson and Carlyle and Ruskin, and the people of that sort. This is no silly Dickens or Shakespeare class, I can tell you. In our class you will never hear anything mentioned that is not real literature. And maybe if we get time we'll do a little French literature, because we can get perfectly lovely translations of all the very best books, and that saves us the tedious bother of looking up words in the dictionary, besides being a better translation than any of us could make. And do you think you could induce Prof. Crabbitt to join and give us a reading on Emerson some time? That's what he's read pretty near every book of literature that ever was written."

I should explain that by "literature," as distinguished from plain, everyday reading matter, Mrs. Symple meant anything that she could not understand. Novels, which she really enjoyed, were not literature, according to her, and were therefore not to be mentioned in polite, cultured society. But a volume of essays, no matter how idiotic, was always worthy of serious discussion, simply because it was beyond her comprehension.

THE CLASS BEGINS WORK.

At the mention of Prof. Crabbitt's name I shook my head dubiously, for I well knew that he held poor, harmless Mrs. Symple and all the rest of her culture-mad crew in profound contempt, and always became more and more angry as attempts were made to draw him into their circle.

I must say I think my worthy and learned friend is a very strong, diligent and healthy recreation with people who say "the who it is" and "I see" while discussing Carlyle and Emerson, and if Mrs. Symple were to ask me, as she did the professor, whether I would not, I would not get angry, but would be simply grateful to her for adding one more story to my dinner-table repertoire.

But to return to Mrs. Symple and her literature class. It started with much éclat, and for three successive Friday evenings she met and solemnly read aloud the stupidest and dreariest books we could lay our hands on.

Our thirst for learning was absolutely unquenchable. Essays on "Spiritual Happiness" and solemn preachments on "The Intellectual Life" disappeared into the eager maw of Mrs. Symple's literature class, and for Carlyle we simply boiled him whole, leaving the matter of digestion to the future.

We smiled at the superior contempt of an enlightened people when we thought of the primitive days when Shakespeare and Dickens were good enough for us. The idea of spending our time over anything so simple as a child could understand it when we could fairly revel in art and marveling on spiritualities.

As for myself, although no one enters into Mrs. Symple's projects for mental development with more enthusiasm or derives from them any keener enjoyment than I do, I must confess that the three meetings of the class were enough for me, and I would have dropped out then had it not been that Prof. Crabbitt suddenly surprised us all by accepting Mrs. Symple's invitation to address the class on the subject of the Emerson philosophy.

This announcement restored my jaded interest, for it was so unlike Prof. Crabbitt to identify himself with the culture element in Oortown society, that I could not help wondering what he intended to do at the meeting and what he would find to say about the teachings of Emerson that would be acceptable to us. Indeed, knowing his cynical turn of mind as I did, I was by no means sure that his remarks would be flattering to the sensibilities of the members of Mrs. Symple's Literature Class. I resolved to be present at any cost, and to keep my ears wide open.

THE PROFESSOR READS.

The meeting which took place in Mrs. Symple's drawing-rooms, which were crowded at 8 o'clock when the professor rose with a copy of Emerson in his hand to address us.

"This evening," said Prof. Crabbitt, with a honeyed smile, "I propose to read to you a certain selection from the works of the great master, which are unknown to the majority of those who made a study of his writings. The fact is that the essay which I am going to read to you is so full of erudition and of such deep and subtle significance that only those who have, like yourselves, obtained a complete insight into the great and enduring principles of Emersonian philosophy are capable of understanding it. I beg that you will follow me closely while I read, and if at any time any of the younger or newer members of the class should fail to catch my meaning I shall be only too glad to stop and make myself clear."

"How perfectly lovely," I heard Mrs. Symple whisper, "and how flattering to our class. My, won't some of those people be sorry they didn't join when that even that cross old professor has complimented us on our culture?"

And now the professor, having adjusted his glasses, began to read: "Principles of triumph, but the peace you bring can do nothing. Yourself but peace, you bring nothing. So be it never. Believe it not, do you? For days are preparing you think good and spirits are raising an event quite external, or some other friends about it, or the return of your sick, or the recovery of rents or the rise of victory political."

AN ABSTURSE DISCOURSE.

For fully an hour the professor continued to read in this strain, while the members of the literature class listened spellbound to the words of wisdom which flowed from his lips.

"I hope you all comprehended the meaning of this mastery though abstruse essay," he remarked, as he laid his book aside.

A murmur of assent arose, followed by a spontaneous burst of applause. "I am very glad of it," continued Prof. Crabbitt, securing his hat and making his way toward the door. On the threshold he paused and looked back at us with a frown and a look of disapproval.

"I am very glad of it," he repeated, "because I have been reading Mr. Emerson's essay backward, and I am convinced now that that is the proper way to read many of his essays."

And the street door banged before we could recover our senses.

THE EDUCATORS.

Regular Monthly Meeting of the City Teachers.

Several Interesting Addresses Delivered—Principals Preparing for the Fiesta Celebration—Plans Agreed Upon by Them.

The regular monthly meeting of the city teachers was held at the Spring-street school yesterday morning. There being so many teachers that there is no room large enough to accommodate them they are divided into sections of about fifty each.

Mrs. J. B. Millard addressed sections 6, 7, and 8 and gave a practical talk on spelling, and Assistant Superintendent J. A. Foshey addressed the fourth and fifth sections in regard to the teaching of arithmetic. He urged that the pupils be taught more thoroughly, even though they do not make so much progress in that study.

Miss E. C. Clark of the High School addressed sections 6, 7 and 8 in regard to the study of language in the grammar grades. She urged that more time should be given to the actual construction of sentences and the securing of accuracy in the spelling and punctuation. She commended the practice of distributing among the pupils books from the Public Library. If they can be made to love noble books, she said, a great deal has been done for their benefit.

Rabbi Blum spoke before section 5 of education among the ancient Hebrews. He said the idea among the people of a perfect man was that he be pious and virtuous. The first aim was to make God-fearing men. The second was to make good citizens. The teacher occupied the highest place in the minds of the people.

A vote of thanks was tendered Rabbi Blum for his address.

PRINCIPALS' MEETING.

At the conclusion of the teachers' meeting, the principals met and made preliminary arrangements for the celebration of children's day in La Fiesta de Los Angeles.

It was agreed that the Spring-street school shall be headquarters for the school people on that day. The public are to be arranged in companies of fifty each, and are to be known as the school cadets.

Each of the cadets is to wear the festa colors, and to and from the Spring-street building is to have free transportation.

A committee to see to the decorations, banners and badges was appointed. The members of the committee are: Mrs. C. P. Bradfield, Miss Rose Hardenberg and Miss L. Williams.

UNIVERSITY CLUB.

About fifteen gentlemen met yesterday afternoon at the office of the City Superintendent of Schools and made arrangements for the organization of what is to be known as the University Club. It is intended the membership shall consist largely of those who are college graduates, although others who have achieved distinction in professional or scientific lines may be admitted.

Committee was appointed to see about securing permanent rooms for the club. Another meeting for the purpose of perfecting the organization will be held next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, in the same place.

Regular Meeting Friday Afternoon—Interesting Exercises.

The regular meeting of the Central W. C. T. U. was held Friday afternoon at Temperance Temple, Mrs. M. A. Kenney presiding. Miss de Velling of Massachusetts, one of our national organizers, conducted the usual devotional exercises.

After the adoption of the minutes the committee for the anniversary of Gen. Neal Dow's nineteenth birthday reported that a series of meetings had been planned for different parts of the city, to follow the one at Temperance Temple, Tuesday evening, March 20.

Several societies will co-operate, and good music will be furnished, so that a fine meeting in honor of the "grand old man" is promised.

The committee for the annual meeting of the Central Union also reported a programme for that occasion, at the regular hour on the first Friday in April. Reports of the year's work will be given by the secretaries and treasurer, election of officers held and other business transacted. After some discussion the report was adopted.

The matter in reference to the "tribes" recently built on San Pedro or Alameda street, each with one door and one window, at which a painted face appears, was discussed as one to bring the blush of shame to the face of every resident of the city, especially when Chinese women point to them as "what you Christians do for us." Referred to the superintendent of Social Purity.

Mrs. Ellen A. D. Blair then spoke upon the juvenile temperance work, urging that we fall into line with our national department, adopting the manuals, the work for senior grade—for the diploma study—for organization of State leagues, hold county conferences, and conventions of L.T.L.s, and later, by the payment of dues, have representatives to our State and national conventions. She also urged the placing of the Young Crusader in homes, the adoption of the rallying cry and motions, and that the L.T.L.'s assist in furnishing a room for children in the Temperance Hospital.

After announcements the meeting adjourned.

The Dog Show.

This year Los Angeles will be the only city on the Pacific Coast able to hold a dog show. San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, all having backed out. The Southern California Kennel Club, however, announces that their sixth annual bench show will be held at Music Hall, April 13 to 21, and are now getting up the premium lists, which will include a large amount of cash and many beautiful articles. The judging will be done by four experienced dog men, who have been specially engaged for the occasion, and there is no doubt that all will be satisfied, and the show be a great success.

Advices from the North state that at least one hundred dogs may be expected from there to compete for the blue ribbons.

Committed to Whittier.

When Frank Tanzola, the youth charged with petty larceny by his father, appeared before Justice Austin yesterday afternoon for sentence a very different aspect of affairs was presented to the court than that during the trial of the case on the preceding day, and the result was that Justice Austin, concluding that the young defendant was "more sinned against than sinning," committed him to the State School at Whittier for the remainder of his minority.

It now appears that the lad's parents are divorced, the elder Tanzola having so brutally ill-treated his wife that she was forced to leave him, and that in order to assist his mother, who is dangerously ill, he carried off and pawned some of the implements from his father's butcher shop.

DISMISSED THE CASE.

Kelley Will Not Be Prosecuted for Embezzlement.

When the case against B. J. Kelley, charged with the embezzlement of funds which had been entrusted to him as agent for the Southern California Amusement Company, was called for preliminary examination by Justice Seaman yesterday, the complainant, Edward Mallin, of the Burbank Theater, acknowledged full and entire satisfaction of the offense complained of. The District Attorney therefore moved to dismiss the case, and the motion being granted by the court conditionally upon the payment of the costs incurred, $15.85, by the complainant, Kelley was discharged.

While there appeared to be no doubt that young Kelley was short in his accounts, the fact that his mother was dangerously ill, and the further fact that he had paid the deficit out of funds sent for the purpose of enabling him to return home, were taken into consideration by the court and Prosecuting Attorney, as it is believed that the misguided youth will profit by the lesson taught by his narrow escape from the penitentiary.

THE Floral Pageant, given so beautifully last year, under the management of Prof. H. J. Kramer, assisted by the ladies of the Unity Church congregation, will again be given at the Grand Opera-house on Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday matinee, March 22, 23 and 24. Many new and beautiful features are added. The little favorites that gave such general satisfaction with their solo dances appear again in entirely new and special dances. One hundred and fifty young ladies and children, dressed to represent various varieties of California flowers, with ensemble dances. The floral decorations will be of the very best.

The few theater-goers who saw Clay Clement last week may rest assured that the thought that they have witnessed the dawn of a new star in the dramatic firmament.

As was said in the playhouse column of the Times the morning after his masterful presentation of "The Bells," his engagement, brief though it was, and his attendance at his performance, was, by long odds, the artistic success of the season.

"The Bells" is essentially a play of pantomime and in this branch of the players' art Mr. Clement is simply superb.

That portion of the dream scene in which he, in simulation, murders the Polish Jew, lifts the limp and lifeless body to his shoulder, bears it to the lime-kiln and, with an awful shriek, flings it into the fiery heart thereof, is one of the greatest bits of playing ever presented to an audience.

Mr. Clement's impersonation of character has that element of realism, that sinking of the personality of the actor into that of the character he assumes, which is a true element of genius.

One can scarcely rid himself of the feeling that the future as any man on the American stage; not only as an actor in tragic roles, but, as was evinced by his impersonation of the German Baron in "The New Dominion," as an all-round delineator of dramatic character. He has a striking presence, a voice that vibrates with tenderness and passion, and the artistic sense which leads him to care more for success as a great player than as a money-maker.

He may have started on his starting tour at an inopportune time, for the situation is not such as would seem to warrant new theatrical ventures, but we may rest assured that he will not succeed today he will tomorrow. The world is hungry waiting for the man who can make its flesh creep and whose vibrant voice can touch it to tears.

Clay Clement can do all of these and he needs not the aid of the aid of the advance agent or the noisy plaudits of the claque to convince the public that a new star has risen.

The world may hear him today, but it will hear him yet, mark that.

THE OTHER ONE WAS BOOTH.
Now, by the road, as Hamlet says, it grieves me sore to say.

"The stage is not as once it was when I was a child," says Mr. Booth, "but it is true that Irving, dear old chap, still has a decent show."

And Mansfield and young Willard really act the best they know; and, as for me, I must be too hard on myself, for we mustn't be too hard on ourselves, though, of course, we are all a little bit of a comedian.

Against some bad art-tendencies; and as for all the rest, there's hardly a play, may say none, who stands the artist's test.

True artists are a rare breed; there are very few, and the artist's prime; and the other one was Booth.

Why, Mac-I mean Macready—but we always called him Mac; and he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

Or, that they said; well, this is what they said; and he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

There but two who really knew how to act; and he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

They didn't mean the younger Kean or Mac; and he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

It caused me to be jealous among the lesser chaps. And as for Tom Salvini, well, his dago dialect would never do for Shakespeare; so to tell the simple truth.

There were only two men in it; and the other one was Booth. Don't think I am in me tongue; 'tis something I detest; but I may say that in me I've got a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

Why, Kalamazoo, and Oshkosh, too, and Kanawha, as well. And as for the young man, he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

Or, that they said; well, this is what they said; and he was a great actor, but he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian, and he was a little bit of a comedian.

magnetism should together enable him to give a thoroughly artistic performance. The part of Virginia, the Roman maiden, will be played by Lillian Dailley.

A new set of scenery has been painted for this production by Forrest Seabury and the costumes and other scenic have been lavishly provided for.

"Virginia" is the bill for Monday and Wednesday evenings and "Monte Cristo" will be presented Tuesday and Thursday evenings, when Mr. O'Neill will appear as Edmund Dantes, a role in which he is familiar to every theater-goer in the United States.

Friday and Saturday, March 22 and 23, Richard D. Georgia Minstrels will be the attraction at the Los Angeles Theater for three performances. The San Antonio (Tex.) Gazette says of the troupe's appearance in that city:

"The company is equipped with some good material and met with considerable success. Their songs did not bear the attribute of ripe old age that characterizes the vocal specialties of many companies on the road, and the Smiths were as good as they make them. James Moore and Billy Kerns are still in the swim, and they showed up to good advantage. Tom Brown, Chinese teller, and the 'Black Patti,' Gauze, the female impersonator, are also good features of the combination. The real live game of 'craps' and the limber knock-about minstrel, James White, tickled all.

The Crescent City Quartette and W. O. Terry, the popular comedian, will make the musical feature of the show, a success.

GOSSIP IN THE WINGS.
Frank Daniels, it is said, will next year appear in the city in a new production. Sol Russell goes to Europe next month for an extended vacation.

Denman Thompson, who is taking life easy these days, will return to the stage as Reginald de Koven and Harry Smith are said to have divided over $60,000 royalties on "Robin Hood."

The receipts of the Metropolitan Grand Opera, which topped $28,000, the first two nights in Boston topped $28,000.

"The Scales of Justice" is the title of Sutton Vane's new melodrama, shortly to be produced at the London Adelphi.

Thomas Q. Seabrook will produce Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englebert's comic opera, "The Kaliff," in April.

inability to know what to do with it after they get it out. They are essentially conducive to fatigue, not to say ennui.

A norther may be defined as a blizzard from which the snow has been extracted. The one that slammed around here yesterday, ruffling the Eagle bird's plumage, smothering creaky blinds, kicking up sand, sweeping the stores full of debris, and leaving the city and its people in a state of confusion, was a fair sample of the meanest weather that ever visited this fair city.

The man who raises objections to the flying of the green flag over New York's City Hall has no adequate conception of the eternal fitness of things and a city that is more Irish than Dublin, that is ruled by the race from Cork and Limerick, should not only fly the flag on St. Patrick's day, but all the year round, and the facade of the City Hall should be emblazoned with shamrocks until it looks like a green tree.

"Forever float that standard sheet." The flag is the thing in New York city. It isn't in it—more's the pity.

The following formed a box-party Thursday evening to witness the "Lights of London" at the Burbank Theatre. Misses Susie Bassler, Nellie Reed, Annie Keene, Kavanagh, Carrie Lathrop; Messrs. G. M. Babcock, S. D. Porter and W. H. Combs.

Dainty refreshments were served.

NEW ERA SOCIAL.
Friday evening there was held at Illinois Hall the quarterly social and dance under the auspices of the Church of the New Era. A literary and musical programme was presented, which proved to be of a very high character. The most successful yet given by the society.

Annette von Brandis appeared in a series of brief readings, and did some brilliant acting. In her play, "Bernice Holmes," she was in her usual charming manner, and received several recalls in return. The dialogue by the company was of a high order, and the dance which followed completed the evening.

The house was handsomely decorated with calla lilies and carnations. Mrs. Ross Clark received in a becoming gown of changeable green and pink silk, trimmed with chiffon. She was assisted by Mrs. Abigail Clark, in a costume of black and white satin, and Mrs. Joseph Clark in an elaborate gown of black satin trimmed with jet passementerie. The first prize was won by Mrs. Peck; it was an elegant Royal Worcester dish. Prof. Higgins captured the gentlemen's first prize, a hand-painted porcelain holder for pens. Mrs. Joseph Clark and her daughter Lee were awarded the consolation prizes. The evening was most enjoyable. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Willard Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. Erna Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. O. DAINTY EASTER GIFTS

"Nature's Porcelain" Ready to Every Hand.

Exquisite Vases and Bewitching Caricatures—Tiny Bonbonnières—Pretty Nests of Eggs—The Comical Eggs.

[From a Special Contributor.]

Easter has become almost equally with Christmas in many families a day of gladness and gift-giving, and while the custom should never be allowed to become a cause of expense ill to be borne, it is quite possible for everybody, high and low, to bring a little extra good feeling into the household by simple remembrances all around.

It is true that many a mother has nothing better at hand than a few eggs, but some of the most popular Easter gifts for children have been made from egg-shells; likewise some of the daintiest for a fastidious friend, and a few feathers glued in place. The feathers are brightened with touches of gold and silver paint. This bird always proves a great success.

Fig. 4. The little fellow can be modeled from Fig. 4. His body and head are egg-shells. These are joined by slipping the splint with a string into the egg-shell and extending the cord up through the head. Features are painted in grotesque expression. The hair is of cotton, arms and limbs of pasteboard. The whole is painted a brilliant red with trimmings in gold.

Pen-wipers for older children are made by decorating ordinary egg-shells like heads. Effective models are those of a sweet-faced nun, a pretty student, with characteristic "mortar-board" cap or a dear, smiling baby in lace-frilled cap. The shell is secured by gluing to a support of several layers of chamois or flannel. ANNA HINRICHS.

WOMEN'S MATTERS IN PARIS.

How the French People Make Holiday.

The World of Fashion Has Moved on to the Riviera—The Little Parisienne on Voyage—An American View.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—(Special Correspondence.) It is to get rid of wrinkles. Every Parisienne that can go to the Riviera has gone, and the Boulevard des Capucines at Nice has become the Paris boulevard for the time—a boulevard set down in the midst of eternal sunshine and heavenly air, where blue-gray hillsides, broken by white villas, descend from snow-capped mountains peaks and melt the crust into deep blue seas. A land where no French artist need recompose masses on color, for there has been a greater artist already here; where there are no nerves or fidgeting and wrinkles never come; where there is never lack of money, for no one ever comes without his pockets full; where flowers always bloom, bands are forever playing and life is one long holiday.

LITTLE PARISIENNE EN VOYAGE. And this little Parisienne, as she appears now in the Riviera, in the very latest of fashions, is a picture of the millinery and dressmaker, is she not the most charming specimen of the skilled arts of France and quite worthy her surroundings? Here is her picture in the morning. She wears dark blue in the morning. She wears dark blue

By tinting the shell a delicate yellow, gliding the jagged edges of the opening, and then adding light designs in red and gold lines, the vase is suggestive of Royal Worcester.

A great variety of vases can be made. They should in every case be filled with dainty spring flowers.

Pierrots. serge, the overskirt tucked up in just one place behind, as though to escape the mud, but in reality for coquetry; the jacket that molds her plump form in the back and falls loose and double in front, displaying a gay skirt above; the bobbed hair, with its curls and novel effect, as though she had been caught in some naughtiness and extricated herself with the loss of a moiety of her hair; the sailor's hat merely banded in front has an enormous Alsatian bow set on behind and a bow larger still is under her chin. The whole is a work of art, the very latest, and therefore the most seducing of all Paris creations, this little Parisienne.

Nowhere else do women wear dresses so gay, so full of light and color as on the Riviera. The colors are of the most brilliant, and the styles are of the most novel. The Parisienne is a work of art, the very latest, and therefore the most seducing of all Paris creations, this little Parisienne.

HOW THEY DO IT IN FRANCE. "Amusez vous" is the new gospel. It is the last word of French philosophy; it is the advice that Renan gave the world as he was leaving it. The future is uncertain, he said; in the doubt that remains you can do no better than amuse yourselves.

There was no need to preach this gospel to the boulevards and down in the Midi. What else does one go for except, incidentally, to get rid of the wrinkles? The pleasure and choice of aristocracy is here that would never come if it were not amused. Royalty lines the coast and princes and princesses, grand dukes and grand duchesses, maharajahs and maharanies are everywhere. These all make up a court of on a holiday, as Marie Antoinette's court was a little Trianon, only on a far larger scale. These have their villa and their palm bowers, and they unbend and play at being children and go out of their palaces with flowers and put on masks and go into the street in dominoes. It is a greater merry-making than Boucher or Watteau ever saw.

And other celebrities are there also: Carous, Duran, Gerome, Detaille, artists who adore pretty women made up by milliners and the stars of song and play, the De Reszays, Calves, Melba—it was to Nice that Bernhardt came last year to play to Patti, and played as she never played before, and the renowned also of the demi-monde, men and women adventurers, the gamblers of life, have deserted Paris for the time to elbow kings and potentates upon the Riviera promenade.

There is no more interesting company in the world. One carnival follows on another's heels, if it is not all carnival. So one body said well that it is like a rondo of dervishes that begins slowly, then accelerates, growing faster and louder, rapid, dizzy a melee of diamonds, lace, velvets and beautiful eyes, fascinating women, flowers, song, perfumes, wine—that works gradually up into a gallop-infernal and precipitates itself in a delirium of pleasure.

Masked balls, confetti and flower battles, night masques with flambeaux, succeed each other, and when a round is finished at Cannes it begins at Nice and is taken up at Monte Carlo, and so passes down the coast to begin again at Cannes.

If one could give a picture of this life—could express in words this youth, lightness, fantasy, caprice! These, defining carriages made of flowers and filled with beauty, moving through a rain of violets and daffodils along a promenade flanked on one side with bannered booths filled with gay crowds and flower ammunition, and on the other by the hotel fronts gaudy with low primroses or white Easter daisies

as much liked. At each plate is laid a bouquet or a single flower, tied with a pretty ribbon to the small gift, whatever it may be. Flowers are thrown carelessly on the cloth, and a pretty green vine is trailed about the dishes.

Of course, the dish of the feast is eggs. Most people dye them, just as we Washington people do for the grand egg rolling on Easter Monday. One mother buys each year the loveliest dish she can find, that it may be to the family a new feast, and piles it high with brilliant eggs of every color. Many build a "nest" of leaves and vines in a basket of soft fresh moss. The gay eggs are beautiful, peeping out of the green in memory of the olden time, when the dyed Easter egg was scarlet "as the blood of Christ," some mothers put at each plate a tiny nest in a small basket, with a scarlet egg laid in the moss.

Her mother sang at fashionable receptions until this child was 2 years old, and her father is said by musicians to be the coming greatest musician and composer of the world. The children take more naturally to music than ducks take to water. The baby, less than six months old, stops crying at the sound of a violin."

The society lady smiled and then with a woman's "I told you so," said: "I do not think I am ever mistaken in a child's intelligence. Children show the real talent underneath very young."

Further down in the city, and away from the romantic views of Central Park which the Herbert children enjoy, lives a family of children, entirely different in professional instincts. These are the three boys of Rev. Bishop Foster brought young Mr. Rainsford over from England fourteen years ago, and in less than a year his name was known from the Leland Stanford region to the Blaine district "down in Maine."

EASTER COSTUMES.

Some of the "Duds" That Will Do for the Day.

A Girl's Stunning Suit of Dark Blue Trimmed With Persian Lamb—A Very Pretty Church Costume—Colored Waists.

[From a Special Contributor.]

Easter falls so very early this year there are not nearly so many costumes and bonnets exhibited as when this festival is celebrated a few weeks later in the spring.

Little jet and velvet bonnets, which have been so much the rage for the past few weeks, are now worn for church, for receptions and for calling. They are very dainty and chic, these same little bonnets, and are universally becoming. There is rarely, if ever, any crown to them, the jet or velvet side bands and the ornament in front comprising the entire hat. They some souls essayed last year, but with blue or black. Mrs. Roche, whose taste in dress is unequalled, is wearing a most stunning gown of brown hopsacking, trimmed with ruffles and a row of satin and brocade. Then with this on cold days, Mrs. Roche has a most superb mantle of deep hellebore velvet, reaching almost to the ankles, and with a wide, trimmed heavily with fur.

There is a great effort being made to introduce the sleeveless Elton jackets of fur and the "waist" exhibited a-spring costume of dark green cheviot of light weight, and at the same time urged the purchase of a jaunty little sleeveless jacket of Persian lamb made with very broad revers. It was very effective, but how it will look on a short, "stocky" woman, I do not care to think.

The happy days have returned when a black silk costume is part and parcel of a woman's wardrobe. If one be very rich, this same black gown is merely one of many. If one is not possessed of an unlimited allowance for dress, this black gown, with different waists, can be made to do duty as a term which should no longer be used—"body" has quite taken its place—and, while at first it is startling to be told by one's maid that the black bodies are all in the oak wardrobe, the shock is soon over, and the new word seems quite natural.

A darkey was bending

OVER A HEAP OF POTATOES SORTING them into large and small sizes. "That must be terribly hard on your back," said a bystander. "Oh, no," said the negro, "but it's a powerful strain on de judgment." When a merchant says he has as good a Corset as the Royal Worcester "it's a powerful strain on de judgment." When a lady attempts to wear some of these ill-fitting Corsets it must be terribly hard on her back. Why not at first buy the best—a Royal Worcester. Vexatious and ill-fitting ideas are at once done away with. You have peace and comfort, good fit and a perfect figure. What else do you need, unless it is a front seat in a church or theater, to show off the beauties of your form through the good-fitting qualities of a Royal Worcester Corset? A homely woman can be made handsome through a little "strain on de judgment." First, secure a good-fitting Corset—one that will not make you look hideous. Go to a good dressmaker; have her fit you a dress over a Royal Worcester Corset; have your dress trimmed in good taste, and use judgment in the selection of colors. Pay proper attention to these points, and they will do more for you than a barrel of lotion, face wash, and paints and powders ever can do for you. A Royal Worcester Corset will do more for you; it will preserve your temper, add to your comfort, and when your day's work is ended you will feel all the better for it. Cramped up in an ill-fitting Corset is like putting a criminal in a cell 3x6 feet. "It's a powerful strain on de judgment." We have corset-fitters—ladies who thoroughly understand their business, and when they fit a Corset to your form, the Corset fits your form. A lady said a few days ago she could never afford a Royal Worcester. "Why not?" "They are too expensive." When simmered down, she caught the idea from persistent advertising, that the Royal Worcester must be high-priced, or why would we pay so much to advertise it? Form-fitting Royal Worcester Corsets for $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2, $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5, $6. We can fit your pocketbook just as well. Have you ever worn an imported French Corset? If you have, try for once a Royal Worcester. A convert from a favorite French make to a Royal Worcester has proven the best class of trade. They have been our most earnest advocates of the merits possessed by the Royal Worcester; time and again this has been demonstrated. Prejudice in favor of imported Corsets has been done away with in almost every case where a Royal Worcester has been honestly tried. Our Corset trade is the best in the city; we sell the best fitting Corset in the world, and we sell nothing but Royal Worcester Corsets.

SPECIAL SALE OF MUSLIN UNDERWEAR. We want to talk to you about quality, style, price. Three very essential points. The Muslin and Cambrics used in this special lot are a smooth, round, even, well-twisted thread, made to wear; the style is the best in every way; every garment has some new feature to recommend it; the embroidery is specially new; the braid used is choice; the workmanship and cut of the garment is unusually good, and everything about them has been well studied out; each garment is cut full size and full length; the laundry work has been well looked after, and the price alone for these excellent goods is very low. We have grouped them in special lots, at special prices, and you will find a choice in a great many different lines.

LADIES' DRAWERS—One lot at 25c; one lot at 35c; one lot at 50c; one lot at 75c; one lot at $1; five wonderful bargains. The materials, style, finish, making and laundering should all be looked after, and this we have done for you.

The ducks led us toward some high grass toward the Sewallik Hills, and we followed them for some distance, then, and without doing much at about 1 o'clock we stopped for half an hour, and then again took up the trail. The grass grew fresher and fresher. The ducks reached the water. Mamiah, my guide, was leading about a couple of yards, when he stopped, squatted, and his open beak turned back toward the water. He gave the gesture. Taking the hint, I crouched down, and gradually edging along behind him, I reached the water. The ducks were, and they were swimming. From us, stood the usual duck search. A magnificent "tuck-tuck-tuck" sound came from the first duck. My imagination had depicted a single pair, nevertheless, there

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS WILD BIRDS CAGED.

A New York Artist's Aviary of American Song Birds.

His Methods of Capturing and Training—Melody of Birds—A Prima Donna—Morning Concerts—A Duet.

(From a Special Contributor.)

It was the late Lord Monmouth who, when asked on his visit to the United States some years ago what he most desired to have in America, replied promptly: "The song of the wild birds."

I am sorry to add that he was disappointed, and that he reported on his return to England "a lack of song-birds."

There never was a more mistaken idea. He simply did not go to the right spots, or if he did he went at the wrong time; for our song-birds are so numerous and inhabit such diverse localities that it would take many excursions to hear even the common varieties in their native haunts.

Besides this, some are so shy that if they think they are watched, and their sight and observation are of the keenest, they will remain provokingly mute or fly away.

I have sometimes wished that the titled Englishman could have spent an hour or so with my birds, for I feel assured that if he had, a different report would have gone back to the old country.

Caged and kindly treated, the shy singers become quite fearless, and former strangers become friendly neighbors. In my studio the bobolink from the open meadow is the companion of the timid wood-thrush, whose home was in the densest thickets. The orchard-loving oriole hangs near the Southern mocker. And the birds from all regions vie with each other in song, at times becoming so excited that the hermit thrushes, after singing their loudest, will fairly shriek in their efforts to lead the others.

My home for a number of years has been gladdened by the songs of these birds, and I have always been on the lookout for rarer singers, both among our own and foreign birds. I started with an American linnet, gradually adding others, till at one time I had thirteen varieties. My collection has included at one time or another, among American birds, the wood thrush, the bobolink, fox-sparrow, song-sparrow, Baltimore oriole, indigo bird, blue bird, robin, brown thrasher, mockingbird, catbird, rose-breasted grosbeak, hermit, russet and wood thrushes; and among foreign birds, green and gray linnets, European blackbird, song-sparrow, South American cardinal, skylark, Russian shore-lark and Norway red-wing.

I now have as many as I can conveniently take care of in my combined studio and bird-room. A corner with a big north window is reserved for myself. The feathered inmates occupy the rest of the space. The room is fairly large, having a second window on the south side.

In the southeast corner stand a couple of long, slender, leafless branches with the leaves on them. These branches spread out, one running along the side of the room, the other touching the ceiling, thus forming a graceful arch over the window. This bit of wood in "The Den" is a great pleasure to the birds, giving them a natural perch when let out for exercise.

Sometimes I open the doors of several cages at once, first putting a large tray filled with bath water on the floor in front of a screened coal fire. The liberated birds all make a dash for the bath tubs, four or five making the water fly at once while the others standing around, are liberally splattered. The song-sparrow is a sad scamp. He is not usually contented with his own bath, but he leaves it and, going stealthily behind the others, with a sharp peck, drives them out—all but the blue bird, who instantly takes and whips Mr. Impudence in short order.

MELODY OF BIRDS.

The song of wild birds is usually a succession of three or more notes, which are continued during the same interval, mostly without interruption. It could be likened to a musical bar of four crochets in adagio movement.

The song of each variety is distinct and quite uniform. The nestling apparently learns the notes of the parent, disregarding the songs of other birds that may occasionally be heard.

It is the male only of nearly all the species that sings. There are two exceptions among the birds of the United States; the female of the Baltimore oriole and the Virginia red bird both sing. Sometimes a hen canary develops quite a range of notes.

It is almost impossible to express the full range of notes, as they are delivered with such rapidity, while the pitch of most birds is considerably higher than the highest notes of the instruments having the greatest compass. Besides, the intervals used by birds are too minute for a musical instrument.

A PRIMA DONNA.

The song-sparrow is the only bird I know of that has six or seven distinct songs or themes. His voice is clear, sweet and very spirited. Beginning with one theme, he repeats it with brief intervals fifteen to thirty times, before he makes a change. This the bird will continue to do until he has gone through his repertoire.

A very different bird, both beautiful and rare, is the showy rose-breasted grosbeak, while his song is as fine as his splendid plumage. It consists of a number of rich, rolling notes, varied now and then by tender and plaintive tones. The song somewhat resembles the robin's, but is more varied and charming. The grosbeak is slow in his movements, and needs more exercise than the rest of the birds, so he is allowed to fly about three or four times a week to prevent his becoming too fat.

MORNING CONCERTS.

Most of our American wild birds in captivity are shy and should have pleasant surroundings, with due attention to their needs and comfort. With these conditions a daily treat is in store for their owner. My pets give a royal concert these dark winter mornings, while the birds sing in music in the afternoon. As the first faint streaks of light stream through the south window there is a slight stir in my bird world, and a couple of hermit-thrushes have a low, confidential murmur. The others shake and plume themselves and take a morning draught with a light breakfast. A young song-thrush, raised by hand, generally flies first to fly back to his perch, where he settles himself and begins to sing. A last summer's robin quickly follows and in a short time all the rest join them, filling the room with beautiful music. The hermits are last, adding greatly to the charm as they slowly, serene notes and blanks that may occur in the general concert.

I have only to close my eyes to imagine a clear, just recovering from a severe moulting, and he is allowed his freedom most of the day. He is absurdly tame and has a most inquisitive disposition, hopping about the room and only stopping to sing when many feathers have been lost that he does not attempt to fly. If I offer the end of a string he seizes it at once in his slender bill and pulls with all his power until I let it go, when away he hops with it, a very proud bird, and needs a big cage.

In his home in the thickets he is one of the loudest and most melodious singers we have. Caged he is chary of song, singing low and stopping at the least disturbance. This has been my experience with old birds.

I think, however, that a young one, caged and coddled through the winter, would, as spring approached, sing to the full power of his throat.

To enjoy the bird and see some queer antics give him plenty of room, then put a piece of hard bread or a peanut within his reach. This he will take in his long bill, run about with it, then, dropping the object, will raise himself on tiptoe and pound it with the precision and strength of the woodpecker. When the peanut is broken in pieces he is delighted and so are you. When let out he makes for the floor, exploring the nooks and crannies on the run, with head and tail cocked sideways at opposite angles.

If studied, almost any bird will show some notable point. That of the pretty indigo bird, with his blue-plumaged and artless, but pleasing, song, in his flights, which is the very poetry of motion, as he darts from the top of the branch to the top of the upper bar of my easel, with so swift a flight that the eye can hardly follow him. Yet his command over himself is perfect, for when in most rapid motion he will suddenly pause and hover over the mantelpiece or the back of the doorway, motionless, except for the rapid whirling of the wings.

A hawk over his prey, a kingfisher also a bird of prey, drops the humming bird over a flower like a hawk, and half a dozen others.

BIRDS AS MIMICS.

Everybody knows what an accomplished mimic the mocking bird is. Some others have powers in this direction, which are really surprising.

The cat bird can mew like a cat. He can shriek like a hawk, and often does, diving into the nearest bush at the same time, much to the terror of the smaller birds about. He gives also a faint imitation of the robin and brown thrasher, and sometimes pours out a queer, but melodious song that is pitched between the notes of the song of half a dozen others.

The brilliant bluejay is a good imitator, especially of the hen hawk. Besides his harsh cry commonly heard, he has two or three deep notes, which are very musical and rich. Our robin, the canary, European bullfinch and Virginia nightingale are all capable of being taught to sing other than their own. For affectionate qualities and high intelligence, there is no bird superior to the last named.

Robin redbreast, taken young from the nest, is a very satisfactory bird to have. He is a persistent singer, and seems happy in confinement. He has imitative powers of a high order. I know of one that whistled a simple air from an opera taught him by his owner; of another who had two short tunes at his command, and a Kentucky robin, who could pipe "Over the Water to Charlie."

The young robin I have receives a daily lesson in whistling. The bells are coming several times a day to him. I feel bound to say he has not yet profited very largely by it, as his attention is so attracted by the birds around him singing their own songs.

A robin redbreast, to be taught properly, should be placed in a room alone, out of sight and reach of other birds. The time to be taught must be whistled frequently in the same key and manner, especially during the morning hours, his owner standing near him.

A hearty and persistent singer is to be found in the merry bobolink. He is a daily learner, being a song bird, though he never refuses a meal when offered. His song is a rush and jumble of notes, delivered with such rapidity that it is almost impossible to follow him. In the spring he is so full of it that the notes ripple out of him, it would seem, involuntarily from early dawn until 6 in the evening. His song, in its simplicity, is not surpassed by any other bird.

HOW TO CAPTURE WILD BIRDS.

In stores where cages are sold the ordinary single or double-trap cage can be had for 25 cents or $1. The trap is made of wire, the lower part is for the tame bird intended to attract the wild birds.

To catch seed-eating birds first make a shallow wooden spoon out of a piece of shingle. Pour half a spoonful of molasses on this and let it spread thinly over the spoon end. Cover this with a piece of wire mesh. The sticky molasses will hold the seed fast. Substitute this spoon for the one that comes with the cage, notched the same way.

Set the trap lightly, so that when the wild bird drops down into the hopper it will fall, trapping him.

Find out the haunts of the bird you want. Put the cage over with the decoy bird in it, in a tree or on a stone wall, four feet or more from the ground. If the place chosen is far from the house it is not safe to go away and leave the trap with your decoy bird in it, as cats or hawks might get him. Better take your station quietly sixty yards off, and watch your trap.

If your home has a garden or thicket, near the trap-cage, that can be hung under a window on that side, but must be looked after often.

Better take your station quietly sixty yards off, and watch your trap.

If your home has a garden or thicket, near the trap-cage, that can be hung under a window on that side, but must be looked after often.

To capture the American goldfinch, yellow-breasted chat or other small birds, a cage with a spoonful of molasses on this and let it spread thinly over the spoon end. Cover this with a piece of wire mesh. The sticky molasses will hold the seed fast. Substitute this spoon for the one that comes with the cage, notched the same way.

Set the trap lightly, so that when the wild bird drops down into the hopper it will fall, trapping him.

whether the dark mass was stationary or floating, much less whether there was "something" alive on it, but he ran to the canoe.

It was a full half-mile to the point where the floating house had stranded. The next second Ansel came up, red and spluttering, to say, as he clambered over the canoe side: "Just like I said—he'd hung his feet in the grape vine on that old tree. Ansel's a gentleman—most any other coit in this place would have kicked me clean to the bottom, when I put my hand on his pastern, tryin' ter get 'im loose."

Dan looked at Ansel with a face of wonderment.

"You oughter have 'im," he said, nodding toward the running water. Straining at his paddle Jack answered back over his shoulder, "Bears don't fly bugs, an' you said there was a rag a-flyin'." It's folks Ansel. Hui! but they were glad we saw and came after them. Steady!"

"An," said he, "spoken that's a bear swim onto that house?"

"They had struck into the running water. Straining at his paddle Jack answered back over his shoulder, "Bears don't fly bugs, an' you said there was a rag a-flyin'." It's folks Ansel. Hui! but they were glad we saw and came after them. Steady!"
